GUAM

The nation of Guam is a U.S. Territory sitting in the western Pacific

Tropical Shores

Guam was formed right on the Pacific Ring of Fire, by two former volcanoes. This can be seen on their tropical shores which are filled with igneous rocks around the age of billions of years! These shores are surrounded with coral reef; over 300 types of coral, and almost a thousand known species of fish!

Submerged Titans

You wouldn't expect it, but Guam is home to Mount Lamlam, which many might not know is one of the tallest mountains on Eath. However, mount Lamlam is largely underwater, meaning that it only reaches 1,332 feet above sea level

BHUTAN

Bhutan is a small country that sits on the Eastern Himalayas, home to gorgeous greenery and towering mountains

70% Trees!

Thanks to the immense coverage of trees and forestry in Bhutan (approximately 70% of the land is covered by forests), Bhutan becomes one of the only carbon negative countries in the entire world. Meaning they absorb more CO2 than they emit!

Sorry Mountaineers!

Despite being located in part of one of the most mountainous regions in the world, it is prohibited to climb any higher than 6,000m, as the peaks of the mountains are considered sacred. In fact, the Gangkhar Puensum standing at 7,570m tall, has never been climbed, and remains the tallest unclimbed mountain in the world

UZBEKISTAN

The nation of Uzbekistan is one of two double landlocked nations in the world, situated in central asia

Silk Road

The city of Bukhara is an ancient city, aging back to over 2,000 years ago. Bukhara is also a former high profile trade spot along the ancient Silk Road trade route, meaning it is rich with plenty of ancient buildings, architecture, and literature.

Open-air Bazaar

Tashkent, a city within Uzbekistan, is actually on record for being home to the world's largest open-air bazaar. The Chorsu Bazaar has a wide variety of products, and the architecture of Chorsu is truly that which is to be admired.
